Harvard won by a boat length and one-half.

One of the greatest crowds that has ever witnessed a race between Yale and Harvard gathered about the course this morning. The bands of the river were jammed, with representations from society of New York, Boston, Newport and Philadelphia. Hundreds of private yachts and boats were strung out along the course.

LUNATIC KILLS TEACHER AND 3 GIRLS IN CATHOLIC SCHOOL.

Then Wounds Ten Others With Revolver in Bremen, Germany; Severely Bitten by Mob.

United Press Telegram.
BREMEN, Germany, June 20.—A lunatic, with a revolver in both hands, entered a Catholic school here this morning and killed three little girls and injured others. The teacher of the school who tried to overcome the man was fatally shot and sank dying to the platform.

Following the shooting, the crazed man tried to escape through an open window. Five little boys were playing in the yard, and with remarkable aim he shot and injured all of them. Making his way from the window to a door he made an effort to escape in that direction. Leaving the school yard he was overpowered by a crowd of angry citizens who beat him nearly to death before the police rescued him.

At the police station the man was searched and six revolvers and 100 cartridges were found in his pockets. His name is believed to be Eric Schmidt. He is a Russian.

The News of Nearby Towns.

SOMERSET.

SOMERSET, June 20.—That staid old body of gentry that likes to be known as the Somerset Town Council is accused of being vindictive. The charge is made by suffragettes. The proposed victims of the council's revenge it is alleged, are the various women's organizations of the town, which, it seems, have been entirely too active of late. The fair sex, it is said, have aroused the wrath of the council in more ways than one, but their principal offense consisted in giving the alleged antiquated borough duds a sound thrashing in the clean-up day controversy last month.

The clean-up day bout was fought by the Civil Club, a woman's organization, of course, and the victory was complete. Council attempted to stop the clean-up innovation by refusing a request to furnish teams and wagons. It is contended, and was "added and abetted by its auxiliary, the board of health. However, there was such an overwhelming sentiment in favor of the women that they were provided with funds for carrying out their plans by voluntary subscriptions after the matter was fully called to the attention of the public.

Council, after "sawing wood" for several weeks, has now decided to avenge its defeat, it is alleged. The public playgrounds, as established last year by the Parent-Teachers' Association, composed largely of women, are located on a plot of ground owned by the municipality, on West Union street. So determined is council to retaliate its clean-up day drubbing, it appears, that it will "get even," although the children of the town have to suffer. For be it known the playgrounds site is to be confiscated "by the crown," for the public use. The playgrounds are to be appropriated by due action of the aforesaid distinguished body, called "old fogies" by the women. Council has duly passed a resolution authorizing the opening of a public street on the playground site. The street does not connect with any other street in conformity with any plan of the town in existence or that could possibly be devised, as for as providing any uniformity of streets is concerned, it is claimed. But the proposed street would traverse and destroy to a great extent, the playgrounds, it is contended by the women, and that appears to be the object.

The new street to be opened is officially known as "North Columbia avenue." But the women claim that it does not connect with Columbia avenue at all, and an examination of the town plat, old and new, it is stated on good authority, shows that their contention is correct. Who would use the new street, which according to the official maps, is at least 130 feet east of North Columbia avenue, is not apparent. The suffragettes claim that nobody would have any use for such a street, and many other people openly express similar views. Of course, the playgrounds enthusiasts point out, the new street would open up some additional building lots; any new street

JAPAN'S SEIZURE OF LADEW YACHT TAKEN AS WARNING.

The Columbia was on a voyage from Nagasaki to Yokohama and put in at Wakayama for repairs. It is a closed port because of the proximity of government forts, and, according to the Japanese law, the owner of the yacht is liable to a fine or to confiscation of his vessel. Mr. Ladew flies the flag of the New York Yacht Club. His yacht left in November for a cruise in oriental waters. Mr. Ladew is shown in the cut with Mrs. Cabell, whose nephew is in the party, and Miss Ladew on the right.

does. But they don't know who wants to live on the "off agin', on agin', gone agin'" boulevard, unless council would erect a new municipal building thereon. It was suggested today by a suffragette that such a location would make an ideal spot for the holding of sessions of town council, inasmuch as the hit-or-miss environment might lend appropriate inspiration to the scene.

Throughout the town, the suffragette battalions are pointing out that streets, avenues and even alleys are separated by uniform distances. They want to know why council desires to wreck the symmetry of the West End and the North Side, but can find no other motive than to mar an institution the women have founded.

The women are circulating a petition among the citizens protesting against the proposed destruction of the playgrounds and the noted symmetry of streets that makes the town one of the beauty spots of the state. If necessary, drastic measures will be taken, it is said. If council ignores the petitions and persists in the street opening scheme, it is believed that the court will be called upon to investigate it in an equity proceeding.

ROCKWOOD.

ROCKWOOD, June 13.—Miss Irene Van Bieckle of Casselman, has accepted the clerkship in Groff's department store. Miss Irene Critchfield, also a clerk in Groff's, is ill at the Critchfield residence, suffering with pneumonia.

Mrs. Jacob Snyder and daughter, Julia, left Rockwood on Friday morning for an extended visit with friends and relatives in New York and Brooklyn, and will visit other points of interest on their return trip.

Ross Kimmell, chief clerk for Snyder's bakery, has begun the erection of a new home on West Broadway street, the foundation and frame already having been constructed.

Miss Levi Wolf is spending several days this week shopping in Pittsburg and will return home with Mr. Wolf, who has been acting as juror in the United States court for the past month.

Millstones on the Increase. It is generally supposed that the use of millstones is becoming less and less each year because of the introduction of other grinding machinery, but on the contrary, according to figures made public by the United States Geological Survey, the value of the production of mill stones, burrstones, chasers and drag stones in this country in 1912, amounting to $71,414, was the largest since 1883, when it amounted to $81,000 and was an increase of $31,345 over the figures for 1911.

FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 20, 1913.

DEMOCRATIC WEATHER.

A great many Conneltsville coke region people who were afflicted with the fever of political unrest are convalescent and repentant. The effects of impending Democratic policies are already apparent and the prospect is not at all cheerful. While the steel business still keeps up and coke is in good demand at greatly reduced prices, it is only too apparent that the business of the steel industry of 1913 promises poorly. It is with anything but satisfaction that we point out the fact that the predictions of The Courier are being verified. Fair prosperity is undergoing a severe trial. She is being probed and tested, and is being stripped without shame by the Democratic doctors and dressmakers.

The country cannot expect anything better while the Democratic Congress is tinkering with the tariff and the currency questions, especially when industry become depressed with its chief manufacturers are threatened with the removal of every vestige of protection which has hitherto stood between them and the cheap labor of foreign countries.

But there is no necessity for a panic; nor is there danger of one, in spite of the apparent fears of the uncertain Democrats themselves, involved in the recent action of the Secretary of the Treasury in preparing for a sudden inflation of the currency. The President One always did believe in inflating the currency, and he is suspected of being an imperator as well as prime minister at Washington. Business conditions have changed since that last great panic. All the power of concentrated wealth is now ranged on the side of stable business conditions. When wild-eyed and witless panic rushes out of nowhere and starts to run amuck the bears and bulls make common cause against it.

The Courier must not be understood as being pessimistic. The future will be saved from serious trouble by the confidence of the people. There will be no depression, but not panic and destruction. Finance and America, one of New York's leading financial and industrial publications, expresses the situation thus: "As might have been naturally expected, on the eve of a radical change in our tariff and business conditions, the market has been shaken by a sudden and unexpected fall in the price of cotton. This attitude is one of conservatism rather than fear or pessimism; and it is entirely constructive that which is the result of restraining their commitments until the future basis of business is better understood, and is confining their orders to present necessities. Business men are not likely to indulge in over-expansion or needlessly to tie up capital."

This sentiment already prevails among Conneltsville coke operators, who are prepared to shorten sail as much as may be necessary until the iron and steel trading is reckoning just how much slowing down will be necessary is problematical, but the outlook at present is not at all alarming to the mariners with stout hearts and good bottoms.

This is not a political desecration, but it is a political statement. The weather on financial, commercial and industrial seas is strictly Democratic.

The greatest danger to the advertising business, say advertising managers, consists in misrepresentation and dishonesty in certifying circulation. The Courier recognized this important fact long ago and has been printing the figures of its circulation ever since. Its rule is to be perfectly frank and honest with its advertisers, and to try to bring them results.

It is evidently the purpose of the membership committee of the Municipal League to separate the sheep from the goats.

NEW TEACHERS ELECTED

South Conneltsville School Board 11th Instruction Staff.

The South Conneltsville school board met last evening and elected Charles L. Gans, editor of "The Critic," principal of the High School at a salary of $100 per month. Miss Anna Kate Welsh of Dawson, was elected teacher of the Eight grade, and Miss William Minick was elected to succeed Miss Martha McMannus who resigned to accept a school in Conneltsville township. J. E. Shope was elected nominator, A. O. Anderson janitor of the Gibson school and Mrs. Emma Miller assistant janitress.

The teachers were assigned as follows: Gibson, room No. 1, Miss Martha Wilson; No. 2, Miss Anna Kiebish; No. 3, Miss Mabel Hetrick; No. 4, Miss Florence Tannhill; No. 5, Miss Lillian Minick; No. 6, Miss Esther M. Green; No. 7, Miss Winifred Bungard, assistant principal, Miss Anna Kate Welsh.

Humbert 1 and 2, Miss Anna Williams; 3 and 4, Miss Helen Sanders. All members of the board were present. The election of the three teachers last night completed the corps of teachers for the ensuing term.

All 1, 2, 3 and 4 grade pupils south of Allegheny avenue will attend the Humbert school.

Picnic at Shady Grove. Students of the Douglas Business College are preparing for the annual picnic to Shady Grove. The school will close for the summer season on June 25, and on the following day the picnic will be held. Former students are invited to attend.

M'CORMICK TRIED TO THROW FRIEL OUT OF WINDOW

To J. J. Enos, Race street between Green and Davidson streets, to Bernard O'Connor, Morrell avenue from Eighth to Sampson streets, to Dugan & Miller, Washington avenue, to Bernard O'Connor, Race street, to Bernard O'Connor.

There was much discussion over the advisability of paying Morrell avenue at this time. Councilman Brennan said that more money is being expended for West Side improvements than the amount of taxes collected from the property owners. Warrant. Barnum stated that the street is one of the most used in the borough and is in a deplorable condition. The contract was finally awarded.

Councilman Clark called attention to the dust nuisance. Street Commissioner James Stouffer was present and stated that he has been unable to water the streets this summer as much as is needed. He was directed to employ two additional men to water the streets.

With reference to the dying waste paper that litters the streets, particularly on Saturdays, Councilman Bishop stated that the men are attending to their duty only one-half of the time. "Let them keep the streets clean," he said. Councilman Decker recommended the purchase of a receptacle to hold rubbish, but nothing was done about the matter.

Chairman Clark of the street committee asked that the bids for the erection of the Calhoun avenue steps be opened, but the request was ignored.

A party of 11th street property owners were present. They presented a petition asking council to repeal the motion adopted at the meeting of June 6, relative to the laying of sidewalks on that thoroughfare. They contended that the walks would be useless on account of the condition of the street and that it would be a needless expense. The petition was tabled.

H. C. Hays moved that the water plug at the corner of Water street and South alley be moved to the corner of Fayette and Cottage avenues. The clerk was directed to notify the water company to have this done.

Ordinances were presented by Chairman Clark of the street committee for the paving and grading of Madison avenue from Main to Cemetery streets and for the grading and curbing of Snyder street between Fairview avenue and Pearl streets. He moved that they be received and advertised according to law. The motion prevailed.

Regarding the Franks' claim of damages to his automobile incurred while running on Snyder street a few weeks ago, it was reported that nothing had been done. Borough Solicitor Munson will make a report on the case at the next meeting.

Councilmen present were Hetzel, Brennan, Hays, Decker, Gilmore, Stillwagon, Bishop, Herbert, Clark, Friel, Reynolds, Burns, Berg and McCormick.

Saving Trouble.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Bivash."

Saving trouble is a thing which ruins men and makes mankind great. All men are born with ambition to save themselves trouble. In this case trouble generally means work. When a man can save an hour of work he is as happy as if he had just found a quarter and knew a place where he could spend it without too much exertion.

There are two ways of saving trouble. They are as similar as war and peace and their results can be distinguished from each other by a mere amateur. Mankind is divided into two classes according to their motive for saving trouble.

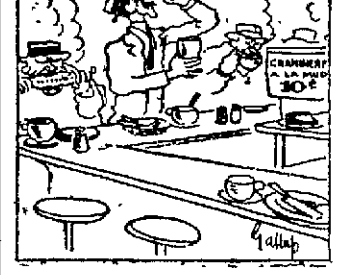

One class of men saves trouble in order that they may have as little of it as possible. One can find these men everywhere, but particularly in the salubrious and where the job is not too much exertion.

This sort of man will let his corn go uncultivated in order to save himself trouble; will let a customer go away unsatisfied to save trouble; will save himself so much trouble and worry and labor in an ordinary job that his employer will often sell out in order to get rid of him.

There is another class of men who save trouble in order that they may have time to accumulate more trouble. That is to say, a man who is figuring out how to do two hours' work in one; but they will not go fishing in the second hour. They will do two hours' more of work. Trouble saving of this kind has given us the sewing machine, the spinning machine, the steam engine, the corn planter, the self-binder, the telephone, the automatic shoe maker and the poppin pill which saves nine-tenths of each meal time for the busy man until he dies of indigestion.

Trouble saving of this kind has enabled the world to do its old job in about an hour a day. But "The poppin pill which saves nine-tenths of each meal time." It still keeps busy the other eleven hours. As a result where man once was content to earn his bread and make his clothes from sun to sun, he now does these trifles in no time and spends the rest of his days in designing automobiles, moving picture theatres, new and shocking dances and enlarged money bins.

The Manufacturer and His Trade-Mark.

Behind every trade-mark that really amounts to anything there is hard work, every stitch and work—hard work—joined hand in hand to produce some article of worth that will deserve and win universal approval.

After a manufacturer has spent a great many years in organizing his business and perfecting his product his name and his trademark amount to something worth while, or else he has toiled in vain. The name or trademark alone of many a big concern is worth thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is often called good-will. It might be called reputation.

The trademark is the directing finger, pointing the way to articles of quality and dependability.

Manufacturers of trade-marked articles are no longer satisfied to advertise their trade-mark only. They are coming to understand that they must also advertise the place where their goods may be purchased. That is to say, they see trade-marked articles advertised more and more in daily newspapers, because the newspaper is the chief advertising medium for creating actual demand upon the retailer.

Katharine Simeon, was bridesmaid, and Fred Simeon, the bride's brother, was best man. After the cerin the yard. 64 feet long. The table was covered with a canopy made of white muslin. Pink and white, the color scheme, was carried out here.

Feins and mountain flowers were used as decorations. Guests were present from Uniontown, Connelville, Scottdale, Greensburg, Pittsburg, Carnegie

FRIDAY—Too Bad, But He Had to Do It.

FORMER SHERIFF SAYS HE WAS FORCED TO SELL HIS STOCK.

The inquiry was somewhat delayed in starting yesterday afternoon because of an extended conference between counsel. For 40 minutes they debated constitutional questions. Counsel for the two judges were inclined to urge that no testimony be taken until an opinion was received from Attorney General J. H. B. Smith, to the committee's right to take testimony following the adjournment of the Legislature.

After arguments on both sides, the committee ruled that it would hear testimony of both the prosecution and the defense, and that the investigation would proceed along the lines of the charges preferred against the two judges. Although only involved indirectly, Judge Van Swearingen became a real party to the case. It was generally regarded when he filed his statement of defense.

A distinguished array of counsel gathered around the table where Judges Umbel and Van Swearingen were seated. W. C. Hovel of Lancaster acted as chief counsel by Attorney E. C. Higbee of Connellsville, A. E. Starn of Harrisburg and former Congressman A. F. Cooper. Because of Mr. Hovel's late arrival in Uniontown, the defense caused several interruptions in the proceedings while consulting over objections which both Hessel and Higbee entered from time to time. In behalf of H. S. Dumbauld, Attorney John Marron of Pittsburgh conducted the case alone. These in his immediate vicinity, however, considerable amusement by his running fire of comment concealing objections and arguments of the opposing counsel. Mr. Marron at times was sarcastic in his utterances. They weren't always witty, either.

After the attorney had argued at length it was announced that the hearing would proceed along the lines originally laid out.

"S. B. Froek," called Attorney Marron.

Mr. Froek took the stand and occupied it until adjournment was taken at 5 P. M. Attorney Marron was then ready for the cross-examination to begin, having finished with Froek's direct testimony.

Mr. Froek detailed his residence and business, adding that he had known Judge Umbel for 20 years and had aided in his campaign for reelection in 1909. His first testimony was relative to the organization of a "cash fund" committee, which he expounded during the campaign. "Sterling told me he didn't intend to make any report of the fund," he said.

He testified that he spent $1,387 of his own money. Judge Umbel told him he would be paid back, he said. He was authorized to spend it in various ways.

"Payette County ways, I suppose," volunteered Marron.

Froek testified that Umbel owed him $1,112.50, $1,387 being his own money. The rest was for a consignment of whiskey into Redstone township. Froek said he was paid on May 20, 1912, a year ago. It was paid following a letter Froek wrote to Judge Umbel, he said. A copy of the letter was offered as evidence. It follows:

Objection was made to Froek telling what other donations were made. The defense objected, and asked the trend of the testimony.

"We want to show," said Mr. Marron, "that this committee collected money that was not accounted for, and that Judge Umbel knew it was not accounted for. If we can show this, we will have gone a long way towards proving this Judge guilty of improper conduct. The arguments were lengthy. Finally the inquiry was resumed.

Froek testified that he saw George O. Rush, a Uniontown hotel man, receive $1,000 cash, to be used for election purposes from Bruce P. Sterling in Judge Umbel's office. Judge Umbel was there.

"Judge Umbel was there when I got mine," said Froek. "Sterling went to the table and then laid a bundle of bills on the table. There is the money for tomorrow," Sterling said. This was the night before election. There were other bundles on the table.

"I received $4,000 or $5,000 during the campaign, for distribution in different parts of the county. I got $1,000 the night before election and Rush also received $1,000. Judge Umbel later told me that Rush returned $300 of his."

In answer to a question Froek stated that Rush was a hotel keeper, a dealer licensed by Judge Umbel.

Asked if Judge Umbel ever discussed contributions, Froek said he did frequently; that he complained about the Pittsburgh Brewing Company's domination. Only $5,000 was contributed to the fund. The judge thought it should have been $10,000, as there are two breweries in the county, Froek said.

"I told the judge to go and see Mr. Miller. He said that he would. Mr. Miller is dead, but he told me that the judge had been to see him. I don't know if it was true or not. Johnson objected to being assessed $250 for the campaign. It better more than he could afford. Froek said he mentioned the matter to Judge Umbel, who promised to see Sterling. Johnson's money went into the fund Froek said the hotel men and brewers raised among themselves. Johnson's assessment was cut down, Froek said.

Sterling, Froek testified, said he collected $5,000 from each of the breweries except the Johnson and Republic, which contributed $2,500 each.

Froek was asked to explain what was done with the money expended.

"I suppose there is a well known method of getting votes with money," asked Marron.

"Buy them at the polls," remarked Froek. He said this had been a practice in the county for probably 20 years.

Froek testified that he did not have to account for any money he expended during the campaign. "Sterling told me he didn't intend to make any report of the fund," he said.

He testified that he spent $1,387 of his own money. Judge Umbel told him he would be paid back, he said. He was authorized to spend it in various ways.

"Payette County ways, I suppose," volunteered Marron.

Froek testified that Umbel owed him $1,112.50, $1,387 being his own money. The rest was for a consignment of whiskey into Redstone township. Froek said he was paid on May 20, 1912, a year ago. It was paid following a letter Froek wrote to Judge Umbel, he said. A copy of the letter was offered as evidence. It follows:

UNIONTOWN, Pa., May 20, 1912.

My Dear Sir—

After your election I came to your office with Bruce Sterling and talked with both of you about the unsettled bills. I owed one bill for whiskey into Redstone township for $37.50 and money advanced by me amounting to $1,375.00, all amounting to $1,412.50. At that time you said that would be paid and it has been more than two years and I think (and I believe you do) it should be paid. Hoping you will favor me with check to cover amount and oblige.

Very respectfully,

S. B. FROEK.

Froek testified that the money was paid the following Tuesday. Judge Umbel answered by telephone, Froek testified, and told him to go to Sterling's office and get the money. Froek said he met Sterling on the way to the latter's office and accompanied him. Sterling paid partly in cash and part in check.

Marron then returned the course of inquiry to the meetings in the committee's office. Froek testified that he frequently saw Sterling hand out money to workers. People got money there on election day, he said, in amounts from $10 up. No liquor was appeared, Froek said, except some bartenders.

Marron then jumped back to the money Sterling paid Froek for Judge Umbel. Froek said the check was for $32.50 and the rest in cash. He said he endorsed the check over to Mr. Sample, who got the whiskey in Uniontown, paying the difference in cash.

Froek was then led to another phase of the situation. In July, 1910, he said, Bruce Sterling told him he had better see Judge Umbel about the brewery trouble. Sterling said the breweries were reported to have been violating the law, and that the Labor and Pittsburgh companies were the worst offenders. Froek testified that he went to see Judge Umbel. The judge told him, he declared, that there was trouble in the brewery business and that the court was not going to stand for it. Changes were to be made. Judge Umbel, Froek said, urged him to see Judge Van Swearingen. Being a good friend of Froek's, the witness said, Judge Umbel declared he didn't want to hurt him.

Froek testified to going to Atlantic City and seeing Judge Van Swearingen. The judge at the time was conversing with L. B. Brownfield. He joined Froek and said "Can't you sell your brewery stock? I want you to sell it and get out, as there are some changes that will be made."

Froek said he held $25,400 in Labor stock. He returned from Atlantic City but was taken with typhoid fever. The following January, after he had recovered, Froek testified that he met Sterling, who asked if he had sold his stock. Sterling advised him to lose no time disposing of it. Froek testified that he sold it at $150 a share. Then the court granted the licenses and stated that it was well pleased with the way the Labor Brewing Company had observed the law.

Froek testified that as Judge Umbel had told him he had evidence against the brewery, he felt as though he had been given a bad deal. He talked with Sterling, who said he had told Froek what the judge had told him. "Six months later I went to Judge Van Swearingen," Froek continued. "I don't remember what it was about, but the judge told me to sit down. He said 'I understand Sterling and Judge Umbel are 'blaming me' for getting you to sell your brewery stock. That is a lie. I told you in good faith, Judge Umbel was granting the licenses that year and said he intended to make some changes.' I asked the judge if he minded if I mentioned the judge's name. He said 'No, but if the judge denied it, he would tell him to his face that such was the case.'"

Froek said he told that to both Umbel and Sterling and neither denied it. Then Judge Umbel called him in. Froek said, and made an appointment to discuss the matter. They met in front of Froek's drug store, the witness said, when Judge Umbel declared "Ed it's a shame the way that goes it—"

Froek testified towards the close of the session that the stock he sold to T. J. Mitchell was worth from $400 to $600 a share. He got $160 for it.

Referring to the headquarters of the secret committee in the Hagan building, Attorney Marron inquired if it was not frequently visited by men commonly known to be "election crooks."

The question was objected to and Marron turned the witness over for cross-examination. Adjournment was then taken until this morning.

Judges Umbel and Van Swearingen yesterday filed their answers with the committee. Judge Van Swearingen was brief. He says:

In response to the invitation of your secretary that I file an answer to the petition of H. S. Dumbauld, I say that I have no answer to that part of said petition with which my name is connected, to wit, the tenth article, as follows:

When the brewery licenses in Fayette County were granted in April, 1910, the court announced the rule from the bench that the sale of beer, through agents, at places other than those to which the licenses were granted, must be discontinued. In the course of a few weeks compliance with the rule was being violated. Some time in August of that year, S. B. Froek came to my hotel in Atlantic City, where I was spending the month, and asked me if any complaints had come to the court in regard to violations by the brewers of the rule of court mentioned, to which I replied that some such complaints had been received. He said he did not believe the brewers were violating the rule, that he had considerable money invested in the stock of the Labor Brewing Company, and that he would comply with the rule of the court upon those having the management of the brewery in which he was interested. I told him that the complaints received by the court included the Labor brewery and other breweries, and that they all must obey the law and the regulations of the court. I did not advise him to sell his stock, or give him any advice in regard to it. I do not know whether he has sold his stock or not. I say that Mr. Froek by the other persons named in the tenth article of the petition, but I was not asked by them to say to Mr. Froek, or did I say to him, the things mentioned in the fourth paragraph of said article. I have no knowledge whatever as to what Mr. Froek did with his stock. Personally, I assert that every act of mine during the entire time I have been a member of the court has been honestly and conscientiously performed in the manner I believed to be right, and that in no matter what I did, or said, or counsel, have I performed an act of any kind that I did not believe to be strictly according to law and in good faith and keeping with the duties of my office.

Judge Umbel's answer is lengthy. It denies the various charges lodged against him by H. S. Dumbauld in the impeachment petition. Judge Umbel specifically denies that he knowingly and willfully violated the election laws in his campaign of 1905; or that he had knowledge of, aided or assisted in the organization of a secret committee. He denies soliciting funds from license holders and specified sums from breweries, as charged in the petition.

He admits that none of these sums were accounted for by him for the reason that he never received them. He denies coercing or attempting to coerce anyone. He contends that his expense account was a full, true and detailed statement of all amounts of money expended by him. He denies authorizing S. B. Froek to make expenditures of money and denies knowledge of Froek having expended $1,112.50 in his behalf. Regarding this claim of Froek's, Judge Umbel denies that suit to recover—it was threatened, on that he had any knowledge of it whatever.

Judge Umbel further denies any attempt to cheat or coerce Froek in the matter of brewery stock, or that he used the power and prestige of the office of judge to promote a brewery merger.

In the matter of the alleged agreement to settle the audit proceedings and prevent further action in the matter, Judge Umbel makes a denial of the charges preferred by Dumbauld. He denies there were any secret meetings in the matter of the discontinuance of the audit. At a meeting which was held Judge Umbel declares that the proceedings were agreed to be withdrawn without any promise or condition on Judge Umbel's part.

In conclusion Judge Umbel says: I admit that our license court in 1910 granted in all fifteen new hotel licenses, making a total of sixty-one hotel licenses in the county, with a population, as shown by the census of that year, of over 187,000. Two of which licenses have since not been granted, and deny all of the remaining allegations of the said paragraph other than so much thereof as avers that certain statements were made by John R. Byrne to a man named Donahoe, concerning which I have no means of knowing but over that I said statements were made as set forth in the said petition, so far as they refer to me or my conversations with me, they are not true. I further aver that in granting the said licenses as in the granting of all license since I have been on the bench, the two judges of the court of quarter sessions, who have equal, similar and concurrent powers and authorities, considered and granted by both the said judges in an honest exercise of the discretion vested by the law in them.

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing, Founded on the Great Play of the Same Name

By BRONSON HOWARD AND HENRY TYRRELL

She grasped his hand without speaking and drew him aside.

"I can only say God bless you, Lieutenant West," she said, with quivering lips. "Some happier day I hope to thank you adequately and so will the colonel. He knows even less than I do at the present moment. But he knows that Frank has taken refuge here, and he will not see him or allow me to do so. You will take these to the poor boy, won't you—this letter and this little packet? It is a sacred confidence, and I ask it, as I know you receive it, freely."

Kerchival bowed profoundly and was off in a second.

Mrs. Haverrill's envoy to her stepson Frank had cost her another poignant scene with the colonel. Before the ball had ended and the excitement of Sumter fairly began, husband and wife had met in the seclusion of the lady's apartment.

"My Desdemona," he had said in more than half serious banter, "I picked up Cassio's handkerchief here, and I have returned it to its owner. That is all very well, my girl, but what is this I hear about you having Colonel Anderson and Fort Sumter. had a fainting spell or something earlier in the evening? You are trembling and excited even now."

"My husband, there is something I have to tell you—something very near to your heart. It is about your son."

"About Frank? Again?"

"He is here in Charleston."

"He ought to be in prison, I suppose. But to me he is nowhere."

"I am sending word to him; I may see him later. Have you no word for him?"

"I have told you he and his unfortunate wife are provided for. Why should you see him? I shall not."

"At least I had thought to convey a warmer message than that from his father."

Here the colonel paused a moment in silence and made his peculiar gesture of violently brushing something aside from before his face.

"Frank is a man now," he said at last. "I couldn't trust myself to see him—and, anyway, he must now stand on his own pins. We all must, for these are desperate days and rebellious boys are not the only concern by a long way. But, here—the colonel carefully took something from his breast pocket—"I will send him something to make a man of him if anything can. He will understand. I know he loves you as if you were his own mother. Possibly he has some little tenderness for his father also. If he has I think he will look tenderly upon this picture and at the same time remember me."

"A miniature portrait of me?" gasped Mrs. Haverrill as she received it from her husband's hands.

"Yes; the one you gave me before we were married. I have never been without it a single hour since I have carried it through every campaign and in many a scene of danger on the plains. You see what a sentimental old rascal I am now, don't you? Never mind. Frank is a fugitive from justice. God only knows what his future will be."

"What may be all right for you, Bob?"

"I am not blaming you," responded Kerchival. "But my state is New York. If New York had gone back on the old flag—your father's and mine—well, New York might go to the devil. That's my religion."

They walked out, Robert and Madeline, along the battery wall by the sea, in silence, as if by mutual rendezvous.

"This is the last we shall be together for the present, anyway, Miss Madeline," poor Bob began.

"I'm afraid so," murmured Madeline. "But we shall meet again—some time," he went on desperately; "that is, if we both live."

"If we both live?" repeated Madeline, in an awestricken tone. "Oh, Robert, you mean if you live, I suppose. So you are going, too, into this dreadful war, if it comes?"

"Yes, Madeline, I must. It is fate—yours and mine together—but I don't regret it! You don't deny it and that gives me courage. You know what duty means. And you know what love means, too, don't you? Madeline, I do love you. I shall always love you, come what may. There, fate has granted me this much—allowed me to tell you how I love you—and nothing can take this moment away from us at least, thank God! And I have the strongest kind of faith in me now that our story isn't going to be cut short here. It may be interrupted. We've got to be tried by fire, maybe, but I can stand it. If—You will think of me, won't you, Madeline?"

"I shall keep watch upon fate."

For the rest of their time together their silences were more eloquent than their words.

Lieutenant Kerchival West passed through one more dramatic scene before quitting Charleston.

In an obscure tavern by the water front he found Frank Haverrill, a slender, young desperado, whose bold, dissipated look had something strangely attractive about it and whose gentlemanly speech and manner belied a certain affectation of hardness and bravado.

All this latter was swept away by the sudden, violent wave of emotion that visibly rushed over his whole being when West delivered Mrs. Haverrill's message and handed him the lock containing the portrait miniature.

With an oath on his lips and tears running down his hardened face he cried out hoarsely:

"I've been a fool an ungrateful dog, and I've deserved jail and worse. And I'll stand the gaff and not blame any one but myself either. But, by heaven, I'm glad now that you settled with that Thornton before I got to him. And I came down here to Charleston to seek him as a friend! Now, listen, Lieutenant West, and I want you to tell this to my father and to my dearest mother, for she is that—here he kissed the miniature fervently—"tell them that I deserve the worst that can happen to me, but that I didn't desert my wife."

"Poor girl! She only allowed that story to go out in order to throw them off the track and help me to escape, as I did. Now she will know that the colonel and Mrs. Haverrill know the truth, and that will comfort her more than the money they are sending her. God bless them! And it would comfort me, too, if anything could, but nothing can, except one thing, and that is fight and plenty of it. I want to fight my way back to self respect to honor, and show those who have stuck by me that I'm worth saving after all. No matter what happens, thank God I've still got freedom to fight!"

"Do you mean that you'll enlist?" asked West.

"To go to the bottom!"

Pity the Unpainted House!

Would you go out in the pouring rain wearing your best clothes if you had no protection such as an umbrella or raincoat? Not if you could help it, you say.

Yet some people expose expensive material to the elements without adequate protection. The building material in your house is expensive and should be protected. Otherwise it will be ruined as surely as the fine clothes you wouldn't wish to wear out in the rain.

Dampness causes decay in wood-work. If you keep out the dampness you keep away decay. Paint made with

ARMSTRONG-M'KELVEY WHITE LEAD
(Dutch Boy Painter Trade-Mark.)
and Pure Linseed Oil

will keep away dampness and prevent decay. We sell it. Come in and have a talk with us about painting.

"Uncle Sam will have a brand new recruit."

the old flag—your father's and mine—well, New York might go to the devil. That's my religion."

They walked out, Robert and Madeline, along the battery wall by the sea, in silence, as if by mutual rendezvous.

"This is the last we shall be together for the present, anyway, Miss Madeline," poor Bob began.

"I'm afraid so," murmured Madeline. "But we shall meet again—some time," he went on desperately; "that is, if we both live."

"If we both live?" repeated Madeline, in an awestricken tone. "Oh, Robert, you mean if you live, I suppose. So you are going, too, into this dreadful war, if it comes?"

"Yes, Madeline, I must. It is fate—yours and mine together—but I don't regret it! You don't deny it and that gives me courage. You know what duty means. And you know what love means, too, don't you? Madeline, I do love you. I shall always love you, come what may. There, fate has granted me this much—allowed me to tell you how I love you—and nothing can take this moment away from us at least, thank God! And I have the strongest kind of faith in me now that our story isn't going to be cut short here. It may be interrupted. We've got to be tried by fire, maybe, but I can stand it. If—You will think of me, won't you, Madeline?"

"I shall keep watch upon fate."

For the rest of their time together their silences were more eloquent than their words.

Lieutenant Kerchival West passed through one more dramatic scene before quitting Charleston.

In an obscure tavern by the water front he found Frank Haverrill, a slender, young desperado, whose bold, dissipated look had something strangely attractive about it and whose gentlemanly speech and manner belied a certain affectation of hardness and bravado.

All this latter was swept away by the sudden, violent wave of emotion that visibly rushed over his whole being when West delivered Mrs. Haverrill's message and handed him the lock containing the portrait miniature.

PLAYGROUND WOMEN AROUSE SOMERSET COUNCIL'S ANGER

Told in Impolite Manner Not to Disturb Street Project and Sensation is Precipitated.

SOMERSET, June 19.—One of the squads of women circulating petitions protesting against the destruction of the public playgrounds by the opening of a street over the same, yesterday afternoon accidentally presented one of the duplicate papers to Howard R. Borge, assistant cashier of the Farmers' National Bank, who is a member of town council.

Borge became enraged at the apparent temerity of the fair remonstrants and forthwith launched into an impolite discussion of the part women should play in municipal affairs. It is said, as council is promoting the new street. The ladies were told, it is alleged, that they are wasting time on petitions to council, and will probably precipitate a bitter fight. The women claim that it has given impetus to their cause and the petitions are being freely signed.

Presto Flake---The Perfect Washing Preparation

"Preparation" is correct—Presto Flake isn't a "compound" because some compounds are not to be trusted. The Presto Flake man happened in to tell us of a perfect preparation that aids in cleaning delicate fabrics without injury to said fabrics or flesh. "Show me" says the grocery man thinking that would show Presto Flake an old representative. A dainty piece of cloth—our cloth—was produced dragged around in the dirt awhile—washed in cold water application of the wonder worker, and—Presto is right! Packages were distributed among the store people for trial and those who used it report marvelous results. Money back if it does any damage. 10c.

Do You Need Assistance

IN THE SELECTION OF YOUR WALL PAPER?

There is a logical sequence governed largely by the existing conditions in your home which if followed will produce correct results. Each room should be treated so as to give it correct form and proportions.

Then there is the question of color and design which must suit the individualities of each room as well as harmonize with the adjoining rooms. Especially is this true of parlors, dining room and reception hall or any group of rooms when considered collectively.

I can render you valuable assistance in the selection of your Wall Papers.

CORRECT MERCHANDISE. WRIGHT-METZLER CO. INTELLIGENT SERVICE

The "Bigness" of a Store

is not measured by a tape-line by thinking people nowadays, but by the rule of accomplishment. Although this is the BIGGEST store in floor-space, it is not necessary—nor desirable—to make advertising copy of the fact. What people know—and can see—doesn't need daily comment, and if this store wasn't physically the "biggest"—in area and brains—persistent claims, without action, would never make it so.

If P. T. Barnum, in the old show days, had exhibited a certified copy of the North Pole, he could have gotten away with it, but Dr. Cooke happened along at a latter date and it got away with him. Times have changed. People who spend money for the necessities of life are wise beyond the olden days, and no store stands much show to Barnum or Dr. Cooke the population and work it twice.

If Wright-Metzler Company hadn't drilled "stick to the truth if you do lose a sale," into every member of its store-family from the first, the wheels might have run backward to zero in no time.

So, BIGGEST in selling-space, biggest in value-giving, in merchandise; in quality; in real service, in generosity to its workers, but out of the running among EXAGGERATORS.
